TAYLOR Doyle is off to Athens for her first taste of international sport.

The 17-year-old Kellyville High School student will be living her dream, competing on the track at the 2011 Special Olympics World Games.

Doyle has tuberous sclerosis which causes epilepsy and seizures every day.

She has had it since birth and there is no known cure.

With medication doctors have been able to control the seizures from 20 a day as a toddler, down to a handful as a teen.

Thanks to a generous donation from the Castle Hill Country Club, she'll have her parents, Shireen and Terry by her side when she takes to the track in Greece.

"The grant now enables both my wife and I to support Taylor by going with her," Mr Doyle said.

"Taylor loves to run and loves to win."
